The very first Danelectro guitars were built beginning in 1954. For many teen-agers, this was their first instrument. Brand new, the cheapest models cost as little as $69.00. Many were sold by Sears, under the label "Silvertone." The most popular models came in a case with a built-in amplifier.

Today, that $69.00 guitar, unmodified, and in excellent condition could cost you $500.00 or more. Because they were so cheap, many Danelectros were thrown away, damaged or altered along the way.

Constructed simply of wood, vinyl, masonite and Formica, Danelectros used "lipstick tube" metal Pickups that were literally purchased from a lipstick-tube manufacturer. The guitars were made simply, with no pearl adornments or expensive wood.

Professional guitarists have driven up the value of authentic Danelectros because they cherish the instrument's unique sound and look. They have a bell-like tone and a very clean sound. But non-professionals, many of them nostalgic baby boomers, are also entranced. There's the show-off, cool aspect to owning one. And the rareness. They have a sound, look and color all their own.

Many of today's top rock guitarists own a "Danos." They play them on stage and use them in the studio. Joe Perry of Aerosmith once offered someone $30,000 for an entire Danelectro collection!

Danelectro Fabtone Distortion

DD-1

Danelectro pioneered tube amps in 1947. This hot little box delivers the definitive vintage distortion. Its tonality covers a range far superior to most popular distortion units. 2 tone controls offer infinite variation. Powered by 9V battery (included) or optional DA-1 power supply.

One of the best selling pedals in the world, the Danelectro Fab Tone, produces vintage distortion with incredible tonality. Dial in any distortion sound, old or new thanks to the great EQ with the 2 tone controls. It has been used by top pros on many recent recordings.

Danelectro Reel Echo

DTE-1

The Danelectro Reel Echo Tape Simulator Pedal reproduces the sound of those '50s tape echo units perfectly and it will hold up a lot longer than they will. The Reel Echo from Dano simulates the sound perfectly and adds a Warble switch to replicate tape pitch deviations. A lo-fi control rolls off high frequencies of successive repeats just like tape while a Tube/Solid State toggle lets you pick your vintage. The Sound on Sound button works just like the original so you can play over the lick you just recorded. The Danelectro Reel Echo gives you up to 1-1/2 seconds of delay.

Pris:
1475.00

Features

- Simulates the sound of tape-based echo delay perfectly
- Warble switch simulates tape pitch deviations
- Lo-fi control rolls off high frequencies of successive repeats just like tape
- Tube/Solid State toggle lets you pick your vintage
- Sound on Sound button lets you play over the lick you just recorded
- Up to 1-1/2 seconds of delay

Danelectro Spring King

DSR-1

The Danelectro Spring King recreates the warmth, the depth, and richness of a 50 s era spring reverb. The sound was tweaked until it was just right. Also, the pedal includes a "kick pad" that, with one kick turns reverb into a thunderous explosion. The kick pad was added due to the fact that guitarists from the 50 s and 60 s used to kick the side of their amp to get this effect. The Spring King brings vintage tone without breaking the bank.
